

Business History Studies Network Bulletin No. 22 – August 2016

Summary

Divided in six sections, the bulletin presents a review of some publications and events amongst the business history discipline in Latin America. In the first section, Debates, Diego Szlechter, Florencia Luci and Marcela Zangaro introduce a revision on the sociological approaches to management in Argentina. The authors emphasize the need to study the evolution of the local management since the 1960s when the first managerial practices arrived in the country. They claim that the discussion in the literature has been always focused on the role of entrepreneurs in development and less in the impact of founders and managers inside the company. Although, professional managers were only introduced later in large domestic companies, the authors call the attention over the challenging environment to introduce new perspectives on the study of local management.

In this number, Gabriela Recio who comments on a book about business, businessmen and political environment in Mexico coordinated by Marco Palacios (2015). Also in this issue, the section Novedades Bibliográficas comments on the special issue on international business in Southern Europe of the Journal of Evolutionary Studies in Business, the new book by Marcelo Rougier on the Argentinian industrialization and the one by María Lenis on Argentinean sugar entrepreneurs. The section Tesis Doctorales, presents the summaries of two thesis submitted by Pablo Federico Pryluka (MSc in History, Universidad Torcuato Di Tella, “Reforma estructural, expectativas y consumidores: el problema de la inflación en la política económica de Martínez de Hoz”) and Agustina Vence Conti (PhD in History, Universidad Torcuato Di Tella, “Resolver el problema de la deuda externa. Bancos, agentes financieros y gobierno en las negociaciones sobre la deuda pública argentina después de la crisis de 1890: la trama de las negociaciones (1890-1907)”).

In Recursos, there is an invitation to join the new special interest group on food, agriculture and sustainability and the group on globalization, growth and inequality (Glocred). Also to browse the Colegio de Mexico website on banking history in Latin America and Spain. Also in this issue, the section on archives for business history (Archivos) calls the attention over two wine companies archives: Bodegas Arizu and Empresa Estatal Bodegas y Viñedos Giol. To close this bulletin, the section Convocatorias shows a list of call for papers.