

Business history and race: A partial, open bibliography

The Business History Conference is working to facilitate the creation of a bibliography of scholarly work on race and business history. We hope that the bibliography will serve as a resource for those seeking to create more inclusive syllabi and understand the historical context for our present moment of reckoning with structural racism in the United States and across the globe. The bibliography is crowdsourced and draws on the collective expertise of the BHC membership.

The BHC wishes to expand the list of references already curated and invites your contributions to the bibliography (The current list of references contains 154 titles).
